

The Memory Thief was an awesome mystery about a troll named Seth who, by day, is a statue by the garden bridge, but when the sun falls he is a memory eating troll. Although, Seth has one problem: trolls are allergic to iron gates, which means he can't leave the gardens. Seth has many questions, like how he and the other troll in the park, Celeste, ended up there. Then one cold night, Seth sees a strangely familiar face. He has seen this face before, but he has no clue where. What Seth doesn't know is that this face is the answer to every question he's ever wondered.

Memory Thief is a mystery with a tid-bit of romance - I'd recommend it to 10-12 year old pre-teens or older because it's pretty hard to follow. My favourite part was how Leonie Agnew (the author) likes to make every single thing so detailed. To be honest I think this is the best book I've ever read.
